son is too far spent. My object is accomplishe calls me.

I am planting a battery of 24-pounders to r zar's palace and the principal buildings of the to^ blaze away about a thousand shells, which, in a space, will do considerable damage. With Acr to a heap of stones, I shall recross the desert, s ready for any European or Turkish army that to disembark in Egypt in July or August.

16th. We have razed the palace of Djezzar an< the city under our shell fire.

17th. Soldiers! With the swiftness of an I you have crossed the desert that separates Afj Asia. The army that was marching to invade destroyed; you have captured its general, its mg waterskins, and its camels. On the battlefield < Thabor, you dispersed a horde that had gathe the extreme parts of Asia for the pillage of Eg>

A few days more and you hoped to capture 1 himself in his palace; but at this season of the citadel of Acre is not worth the loss of even a f the brave lives its capture would cost are needed important operations.

20th. (To the Divisional Generals.) The will be beaten at seven o'clock at night by one d
